

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder Workshop (Adlerian Psychology Approach)

PRESENTER

Hamid Alizadeh, Ph.D., is a professor of psychology who has been teaching and practicing child psychopathology for over 20 years.

He is a Diplomate in Adlerian Psychology and has published over 80 articles and books.

The Ontario Society of Adlerian Psychology (ONSAP) invites you to attend a Summer Online Workshop.

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) is one of the most frequent diagnosis among children and adolescents seeking psychological or psychiatric services. Mental health professionals, parents and educators need to know how to view and how to intervene.

Adlerian psychology views ADHD in a systematic-holistic context and involves both the parents and the individual. Adler believed that each person develops his or her lifestyle, is an “imperfect human being” and capable of realizing and managing his or her problems. Relevant Adlerian psychoeducational interventions will be explained. The workshop will include brief lectures on each section and practical demonstrations to introduce the assessment tools and treatments.

Participants Will Learn:

- Identity of ADHD
- Executive Functions and Social Aspects in ADHD
- ADHD Family and School Challenges
- Assessment of ADHD
- Parent Training for ADHD: Focusing on Adlerian Techniques

Dates: June 19 and 26, 2020

Time: 10:00AM-12:00PM (each day)
