

ONTARIO SOCIETY OF ADLERIAN PSYCHOLOGY

TELECONFERENCE

Wednesday, September 24, 2014

No Inferiority = No Compassion

In this learning session with Adler Graduate School professor and veteran therapist John Reardon you can expect to understand Adler's clear views on inferiority. The emphasis will be on where it comes from and how it is "useful" or "useless". There will also be a connection made between Inferiority and Compassion, and a need for application of this connection. You will be encouraged to participate.

Learning Outcomes:

- Participants will experience a process that helps identify the naturalness of inferiority.
- You will be able to differentiate how use of inferiority is "useful" and "useless".
- Based on ongoing dialogue you will discover how inferiority can create empathy.
- You will learn how the information and ideas covered in this workshop can be useful in your work.

Who Should Attend:

Therapists, counselors, educators, social workers, coaches, students, parents, and anyone interested in Adlerian theory and its application.

To purchase John's books, visit www.phoenixprocessconsultants.com and click on the Writings By John tab.

Date: Wednesday September 24, 2014

Time: 7:00 PM - 8:30 PM EST

Cost: Members: $15

Non-Members: $20

Note: Participants may have to pay for long-distance charges for the Teleconference.

If you have any questions, please contact the EPDC at onsap.epdc@gmail.com

John M. Reardon

Since founding Phoenix Process Consultants in 1984, John has worked with individuals, couples, families and organizations that are experiencing conflict, anxiety, chaos, and unfulfilling lives. He helps clients use their "spirit to overcome" problems, issues, and barriers, and to create new and realistic visions, goals, and action plans. He also helps clients to establish relationships that work through realistic negotiation and resolution. John's method is interactive, direct, energetic, and results oriented. You can expect meetings to be active and engaging.

John is also a Professor at the Adler School of Professional Psychology where he specializes in basic therapy skills, marriage and family therapy and advanced therapy interventions, as well as, organization development, chaos and transformation and Adler applied to organizations.

John is a prolific author in the areas of Wellness, Life Processes, Conflict Resolution, Chaos and Transformation, and Spirituality.

Please feel free to learn more about John and the Phoenix Process Consultants at www.phoenixprocessconsultants.com.

To Register:

1. Go to www.adlerontario.ca
2. Click on Events at the top of the home page and then go to Current Events and follow the steps to purchase your ticket through Eventbrite.

The ONSAP Education and Professional Development Committee provides educational, professional development and networking opportunities related to Adlerian Theory and Practice.